Dan Dorsch

Rabbi

You may have missed a groundbreaking study released at the end of last year about the state of the American rabbinate.

You may be thinking: who cares? After all, we already have two terrific rabbis (aww, shucks).

Yet the findings in this study say a great deal about where Jewish leadership in America is headed.

There are currently 4,144 non-Haredi rabbis in the United States. Only 6 percent of those serving today are under 35, while 25 percent are over 65. The conclusion is obvious. Retirements will soon outpace replacements, especially since rabbis rarely retire early.

The pipeline is also shifting in unexpected ways. Today, the majority of students in American rabbinical schools across all denominations are second-career students: nearly 66 percent. In other words, very few of the people training for the rabbinate today grew up dreaming of becoming rabbis. Many pursued other paths first and later felt called to return. This is a significant change from when I was in school. In my class of 20 students, only four were second-career.

The demographics of future rabbis are also changing. Fifty-one percent of current students identify as LGBTQ. Twelve percent identify as a race other than white. Twenty percent are Jews by Choice. When I was ordained in 2010, all three of those numbers were essentially zero.

Most striking is that the long decline in rabbinical school enrollment has finally leveled out. After October 7, applications surged. Many talented people now see the rabbinate as a meaningful path to make a difference in the Jewish world. I could not agree with them more.

At the same time, almost none of these students imagine themselves in a pulpit. Hillel positions routinely draw around 16 applicants. Pulpit positions see around 5. According to the study, what once looked like a pipeline problem is better described as a right fit problem. There is a gap between the roles students hope to fill and the roles available in the field.

From my perspective, the most important data point is that 97 percent of rabbis find their work deeply rewarding. As I mark fifteen years since my ordination, I feel the same. No one ever said that serving as a rabbi was easy. My family chooses an intentionally countercultural lifestyle that elevates Judaism and tradition above some of modernity's mixed blessings. But there is something about being present for people in moments of joy and in moments of sorrow that makes this work profoundly worthwhile.

Martin Buber is said to have taught that the primary task of the rabbi is to build connections between people. If that sounds like you, let's talk about rabbinical school. And if it were your second career, the good news is that you will be in very good company.

Elliot Okrent

President

"If you need a friend, don't look to a stranger. You know in the end, I'll always be there. And when you're in doubt, and when you're in danger, take a look all around, and I'll be there." – When in Rome

When I wrote my very first message as President, I described Etz Chaim as a symphony; a community where every group, every volunteer, every family, and every individual plays a part in creating something larger than themselves. I didn't use that image lightly. It was genuinely how I saw our congregation from the beginning: coordinated, collaborative, and full of heart.

Two years later, that vision has only been reinforced. If anything, I understand it more deeply now. What has stood out most to me is not what I brought to the role, but what this community brings to each other:

- You support one another in ways big and small.
- You show up, consistently, thoughtfully, and with purpose.
- You lead with generosity, whether you hold a title or simply care enough to help.
- You embrace joy, meaning, and humor, even in difficult times.
- You move forward together, grounded in values and guided by compassion.

These are the qualities that make Etz Chaim feel like music. Not because everything is perfect, but because everything works together.

Throughout these messages, I included song lyrics because I've always believed there's a song for everything - from moments of celebration to times of hope. Music helps me express things that were sometimes hard to put into words, and it became a thread that connected one month to the next.

So, to summarize the two years you've allowed me the honor to serve our community, I've included a QR code to a Spotify playlist (Spotify account needed) of the songs quoted in my Voice of Chaim articles - a small soundtrack to accompany our shared story.

Thank you for humoring me and reading my monthly rambles. It was a learning experience for me – and hopefully, a few of you got something out of it, too.

Now it's time to shift to my new role as Immediate Past President and Parliamentarian as we welcome the leadership of a new and energized Board of Trustees.

Thank you for your trust, your kindness and the harmony you create simply by being part of Etz Chaim.

Rock on!

Marty Gilbert

Executive Director

On February 14, a new synagogue President, Executive Board, and Board of Trustees will be installed here at Congregation Etz Chaim. The incoming slate was approved on December 7 at the Annual Congregational Meeting after months of deliberation, interviews, and setting of expectations by the committee that determined the slate. That day was also our actual 50th Anniversary.

What appears on the surface as a very simple and easy process is, in fact, very time-consuming and detailed. We here at Etz Chaim are very fortunate to have such a dedicated and passionate group of lay leaders in our ranks. Since I started here in June of 2017, I have been extremely impressed with the session planning that has taken place and the thorough way the process plays out. In the past 8-1/2 years, I have worked with five presidents and five different executive boards and boards of trustees. Everyone involved has a great vision for Etz Chaim and is also a strong supporter of what we are as a Conservative Jewish synagogue.

We continue to move seamlessly from leadership team to leadership team because of the dedication and vision of our lay leaders and their partnership with clergy and professional staff.

What I have learned in these past 8-1/2 years is that we can shift within our vision and represent ourselves based on our ever-changing world. One of our biggest challenges will always be financial, but to some extent, that challenge is overshadowed by our need to have more people interested in taking on leadership positions. Fundamentally, we will always be what we are, a Conservative Jewish congregation; but within that basic framework, we can make a difference in our congregants' lives and in the community we serve and call our home. That comes from all of you.

I want to thank Elliot Okrent for his guidance, calmness, and steadiness these past two years as president. It has been a privilege to work with him. I look forward to working with Lisa Olens for the next two years as she helps "Create Meaningful Jewish Experiences" for all of us at Etz Chaim.

We celebrated our Jewish New Year back in September for Rosh Hashanah. We talked about starting new, having a sweet new year, and making better choices. But even knowing this, we sometimes forget to do better. But guess what? We have another New Year on January 1 and another opportunity to introduce the concept of starting new. While setting resolutions might seem too advanced for young learners, the themes of a fresh start, goal-setting, and celebration can be worked into the curriculum in engaging and meaningful ways. The New Year offers a wonderful opportunity to help children explore self-awareness, time concepts, and social-emotional skills.

The New Year introduces preschoolers to the concept of time and transitions. While they might not grasp the idea of calendars, they can begin to understand how the seasons change. When we are outside with our preschoolers, we identify seasonal changes. We talk about what they saw during the past year—fallen leaves in autumn, blooming flowers in spring, and the current winter scenery.

Although the idea of resolutions may be too advanced, we can certainly discuss the idea of goal setting. Young learners can set such goals as “I will be a better friend”, “I will work on following directions” and “I will be more helpful at home”. These are obtainable goals for preschoolers. And perhaps the most exciting lesson to share during the new year is the idea of celebrating all those new beginnings like, “I can now write my name”, “I can now potty on my own”, “I am now able to climb the ladder on the playground”.

Celebrating the new year helps young children embrace change, growth and gratitude for all that is to come.

Meet Our Team Part 2

I hope you enjoyed getting to know our Gan K'tan (preK) and Gan (kindergarten) teams. I would like to introduce you to the Kitah Alef (first grade) and Kitah Bet (second grade) teams.

Kitah Alef is led by Fran Friedrich; Morah Fran. She is new to teaching Religious School, but not new to Etz Chaim. Fran and her husband, Bruce, have been members of Congregation Etz Chaim for more than 25 years. They have two adult children, Lindsay and Matthew, who each celebrated their Bat/Bar Mitzvahs here. Early in her career, Fran worked in Daycare, and after a couple of years, she transitioned into banking, where she has enjoyed a long career. She never lost her desire to be with children, and this opportunity was one she could not refuse.

Fran feels that Religious School is a special place where a child's love for Judaism is sure to grow. Her goals include bringing joy to the classroom each week while learning more about our Jewish holidays, prayers, and traditions. Each week, they have been singing, playing Rosh Hashana Bingo, making Hebrew Name bead bracelets, doing lots of arts and crafts, interviewing Rabbi Dorsch, learning about Tzedakah, decorating the Sukkah, and helping each other with kindness.

Working alongside Morah Fran is Ella Needle. This is her first year working in our Religious School. But her family has been at this synagogue for many years. Ella's warmth and kindness are a magnet to the first graders, and she works as a madricha, "because I love seeing all the kids' smiling faces every week and it's a great way to keep in touch with my Jewish identity."

Also on the Kitah Alef team is Ari Flaks. He is a ninth grader at the Weber School, and is in his 2nd year of being a madrich. Ari brings a special spirit to his class and is a big hit with the first graders.

Alex Goldband will be called to the Torah as a Bar Mitzvah on January 24, 2026 - 6 Shevat 5786. He is the son of Riva and Clark Goldband. Alex's Bar Mitzvah Parasha is Bo. He is a 7th grader at Dickerson Middle School. Alex has been a student in our Religious School for eight years and attended our Preschool for four years. His hobbies and interests include spending time with his family, friends, and two dogs. Alex also loves reading historical non-fiction, playing Fortnite, and watching The Simpsons.

Alex's D'var Torah Quote is "Bo translates to 'to enter'." Today, I step forward into Jewish adulthood with open eyes, an open heart, and an open path before me. For his mitzvah project, Alex replanted the Daffodil Garden at Etz Chaim with help from the Daffodil Project organizers and his closest friends. The Ever-Renewing People "Tradition!" sang Tevye, "that's how we keep our balance!" Tradition is our superpower; it's why we're Jewish. We know that the words we say, the rites we practice, the ethics we embrace have come down through the generations. But there is another source of our power, one not often recognized – our remarkable ability to re-invent, re-imagine, re-interpret our faith, our institutions, our identity in moments of crisis. This capacity for meeting catastrophe with spiritual creativity may be the real secret of our survival. At this moment of our history, we may need this capacity more than ever. This Shabbat, we will celebrate the Jewish genius for renewal, rebirth, and resurgence.

Friday Evening: The World Stands on Three Pillars

It was the most beautiful building in the ancient world – the Temple of Jerusalem. It was the sacred center and symbol of Jewish life and identity. And in one afternoon in the first century, it was gone, destroyed. By rights, we should have disappeared from history. Instead, we found a revolutionary new way to live our truth, a new story to tell, and a new way to bring the divine into our world. It's hard to imagine our sainted ancestors as anything but paragons of tradition. In fact, they were the most radical Jews who ever lived. On Friday night, we'll meet these extraordinary souls and the spiritual revolution they engineered.

Saturday Afternoon: Like A Fiddler on the Roof

In 1964, Look Magazine, then the second most popular news magazine in America, published a story entitled "The Vanishing American Jew". The piece predicted that by 1980, there would be only a few identified Jews left in America, and by the year 2000, we'd be gone altogether. The truth is, Look Magazine is gone, and we're still here! How could that be? In that same year, 1964, "Fiddler on the Roof" opened on Broadway. The answer to that mystery is found in that show. How Judaism collided with modernity and survived - will be our focus on Shabbat afternoon.

About Rabbi Ed Feinstein

"God created humanity," wrote Elie Wiesel, "because God loves stories." Rabbi Ed Feinstein loves stories too - and spends his time sharing the stories of the Jewish people. Teacher, lecturer, storyteller, Rabbi Feinstein is the rabbi of Valley Beth Shalom in Encino, California, and a lecturer at the Ziegler Rabbinical School of the American Jewish University. He has served on the faculty of the Wexner Heritage Program, Milken Community High School, the Chautauqua Institution, and the Shalom Hartman Institute. Raised in the back of his parents' bakery on the wild frontiers of the West San Fernando Valley, Ed graduated from the University of California at Santa Cruz, Columbia University Teachers College, and the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, where he was ordained a rabbi and earned his doctorate in Jewish education. He was the founding head of the Solomon Schechter Academy of Dallas, Associate Rabbi of Congregation Shearith Israel in Dallas, and Executive Director of Camp Ramah in California. He came to Valley Beth Shalom in 1993 at the invitation of the renowned Rabbi Harold Schulweis, and succeeded Schulweis as the congregation's senior rabbi in 2005.

His latest book, In Pursuit of Godliness and a Living Judaism, is an intellectual biography of his mentor, Rabbi Harold Schulweis.

Ed shares life with Rabbi Nina Bieber Feinstein, their three children, and their spouses, and three adorable grandchildren. Every Friday afternoon, he bakes brownies from a recipe revealed to his ancestors at Mount Sinai.

IS THERE A NEW BABY IN YOUR HOUSE?

Shalom Baby!

Once the synagogue has been notified, we're here to provide a warm welcome to the newest member of your family. We can suggest resources for a brit milah or a simchat bat, provide some nourishment for the whole family during those hectic first days and even provide your little one with some Etz Chaim "merch"!

DO YOUR CHILDREN NEED A LOCAL GRANDPARENT?

Honorary Bubbes and Zaydes (Grandmothers and Grandfathers)

Sometimes grandparents live too far away for regular visits or even visits on special occasions; even local grandparents are sometimes unavailable. If you'd like your child or children to have the special gift of connection with a local bubbe or zayde, a savta or saba, we can arrange it!

WOULD YOU WELCOME A VISIT FROM A NEW FRIEND?

Lev El Lev (Heart to Heart)

Sometimes illness, age, the death of a spouse or partner – even a new move to this area – can leave us feeling isolated and lonely. If you'd welcome the chance to meet a new friend, share a cup of coffee and maybe some life stories, we'd be happy to provide that friend for you!

DON'T FIGHT A MEDICAL BATTLE ALONE

Yad B'Yad (Hand in Hand)

If you're facing or battling a medical challenge, walk down that road hand-in-hand with someone who's already made that journey. A member of our congregation who has faced a similar medical issue can provide information, tips and other resources as you navigate the road ahead.

WOULD A VISIT LIFT YOUR SPIRITS?

Bikkur Cholim (Visiting the Ill)

Time in the hospital, in rehab or during recuperation at home can be very long. A visit from a member of our congregation who comes with a smile -- and maybe even a joke or two -- can help break the boredom.

HAS A LOVED ONE PASSED AWAY?

Nefesh L'Nefesh (Soul to Soul)

After the synagogue has been notified of the death of a congregant or a congregant's loved one, Nefesh L'Nefesh volunteers arrange a meal for the immediate family of the deceased after an in-town funeral. (Those congregants who observe shiva at home after an out-of-town funeral receive a fruit platter.) With our rabbis, we can also provide both short-and long-term resources to help you deal with loss and grief.

- Do you have a milestone birthday, anniversary, or another significant life event? Observing a yahrzeit?
- Being called to the Torah is a great way to commemorate the occasion whether honoring a simcha or honoring the memory of a loved one.
- We also honor those who have volunteered at the synagogue to mark a job well done.

Social Action/ Tikkun Olam

At Etz Chaim, we care about the world around us. Through a variety of opportunities within Etz Chaim and the greater Atlanta community, Tikkun Olam is one of the cornerstones of Jewish tradition.

We continue to participate in the following annual events:

- Hunger Walk benefiting the Atlanta Community Food Bank and Kosher Pantry
- Knitting scarfs with our Sisterhood to provide warmth to our friends at MUST Ministries
- Cooking meals for the residents at Rebecca's Tent, a women's shelter, during the month of February
- Men's Club/Social Action annual blood drive with Life South
- Monthly food drive for the Kosher Food Pantry at JF&CS
- Educational programs on anti-sex trafficking and protecting your child from predators

If you have suggestions or would like to get involved in Social Action programs, please feel free to contact Sharon Lightstone, chair.

Join the Etz Chaim Recycling Team as a rotating volunteer for the weekly collection of paper, plastics, glass, and cardboard from throughout our building. To join the team, contact Billy Balser at Balser18@bellsouth.net.
